AIRLINE SOCIAL NETWORKING SITE INTRODUCES NEW FEATURE – LIVE FLIGHT TRACKING

*Hartford, Connecticut—March 23, 2009—*Just over a month old, Aerhub.com, the Hartford-based internet start-up is an online social network that appeals to airline professionals that are looking for a community all their own. This young and energetic website combines the ever so popular social web with the tight bonded niche of the aviation world. Not only does the website allow you to meet friends, view and post jobs, and get the latest information in airline news, the website also offers a new live flight tracking feature that has just been launched.

Throughout the past month, Aerhub has experienced rapid growth with new registered users daily. Appealing to the airline professional web socialites have been the site's plenteous features: live chat, discussion forums, blogs, video uploads, daily news, groups, events, classifieds, individualized profiles, and now the new live flight tracking.

The live flight tracking feature will let registered users view North American and European flights in real-time. The feature also offers Google earth maps, real-time weather, Airport activity, aircraft type, altitude, heading, speed, scheduled flights and actual flight times. The feature was built through a partnership with Airnav and Aerhub. Founder and CEO of Aerhub.com, Wilkinson Egwu says "This fast database technology is easy to use and is the only web based flight tracking utility available and Aerhub is the first to offer it. Pilots and flight attendants can now track down friends and co-workers with ease."

Airline professionals should continue to monitor Aerhub.com as new features are constantly being added for the benefit of aviation personnel. The next perk in the making will be the Aerhub Club Card. By creating a partnership with airlines, the Aerhub Club Card will make it possible for qualified members to fly at a reduced rate or even free of charge.
